Call for Papers - Student Voice

Deadline for submissions: 1 March 2016

Contributors are encouraged to provide in-depth analysis on the specific role played by digital technologies in creating a space for student voice: how are students heard? How are their views taken into account in the design, monitoring and assessment of their learning? How is technology, and digital technology in particular, used to enhance their participation and engagement?

The call is open to theoretical, empirical studies, reviews of the literature or critical analyses carried out in the area.
